ORGANIZERS OF VA. RALLY, DRIVER SUED FOR $3M

1 Two people who say they were injured in a far-right rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, sued the man charged with killing a woman by driving his car through the crowd as well as the event's organizers on Tuesday for $3 million. Tadrint Washington and Micah Washington said in papers filed in Charlottesville circuit court that they had been among the people hurt when James Alex Fields drove his car into a crowd of counter-protesters, killing one. They had been driving home and their car was struck by Fields car, and some of his pedestrian victims were also hurled onto their vehicle, the lawsuit said. The lawsuit names Fields, "Unite the Right" rally organizer Jason Kessler and about two dozen alt-right leaders and organizations as defendants.

NORTH KOREA DELAYS GUAM MISSILE FIRING

2 North Korean leader Kim Jong Un has delayed a decision on firing missiles toward Guam while he waits to see what the United States does, the North's state media reported as the United States said any dialogue was up to Kim. The U.S. and South Korea have prepared for more joint military drills, which has infuriated the North, and experts warned it could still go ahead with a provocative plan. Kim inspected the command of the North's army on Monday, examining a plan to fire four missiles aimed at landing near the U.S. Pacific territory of Guam, the official KCNA news agency reported. "He said that if the Yankees persist in their extremely dangerous reckless actions on the Korean peninsula and in its vicinity, testing the self-restraint of the DPRK, the latter will make an important decision as it already declared," KCNA said.

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

AMERICANS' DEBT LEVEL NOTCHES A NEW HIGH

4 Americans' debt level notched another record high in the second quarter, after having earlier in the year surpassed its pre-crisis peak, on the back of modest rises in mortgage, auto and credit card debt, where delinquencies jumped. Total U.S. household debt was $12.84 trillion in the three months to June, up $552 billion from a year ago, according to a Federal Reserve Bank of New York report. The proportion of overall debt that was delinquent, at 4.8 percent, was on par with the previous quarter. However a red flag was raised over the transitions of credit card balances into delinquency, which the New York Fed said "ticked up notably." Loosening lending standards have allowed borrowers with lower credit scores to access credit cards, Andrew Haughwout, an in-house economist, said in the report.

AMAZON ADDS 'INSTANT PICKUP' IN US

5 Amazon.com Inc. is rolling out U.S. pickup points where shoppers can retrieve items immediately after ordering them, shortening delivery times from hours to minutes in its latest move into brick-and-mortar retail. The world's largest online retailer has launched "Instant Pickup" points around five college campuses, such as the University of California at Berkeley, it said on Tuesday. Amazon has plans to add the program to more sites by the end of the year. Shoppers on Amazon's mobile app can select from several hundred fast-selling items at each location, from snacks and drinks to phone chargers. Amazon employees in a back room then load orders into lockers within two minutes, and customers receive bar codes to access them. Its Instant Pickup program targets impulse buys.

Trump casts blame on both sides for deadly violence in Virginia

Trump has faced a storm of criticism over his response to the deadly violence.

President Donald Trump unabashedly insisted on Tuesday that both left- and right-wing extremists resorted to violence during a weekend rally by white nationalists in Virginia, and that some present were peacefully protesting plans to remove a Confederate monument when the upheaval began.

Trump, taking questions from reporters in the lobby of Trump Tower in New York, reverted to his initial comments blaming "many sides" for Saturday's violence in Charlottesville, a day after bowing to pressure to explicitly condemn the Ku Klux Klan, neo-Nazi and white supremacist groups.

"They came at each other with clubs ... it was a horrible thing to watch," Trump said during what was supposed to be an announcement about his administration's infrastructure policy. He also said left-wing protesters "came violently attacking the other group.

Many of the rally participants at the Charlottesville protest were seen carrying firearms, sticks and shields. Some also wore helmets. Counter-protesters likewise came equipped with sticks, helmets and shields.

The two sides clashed in scattered street brawls before a car plowed into the rally opponents, killing one woman and injuring 19 others. A 20-year-old Ohio man, James Fields, said to have harbored Nazi sympathies, was charged with murder.

Two state police officers also were killed that day in the fiery crash of the helicopter they were flying in as part of crowd-control operations.

Addressing the melee for the first time on Saturday, Trump denounced hatred and violence "on many sides." The comment drew sharp criticism across the political spectrum for not explicitly condemning the white nationalists whose presence in the Southern college town was widely seen as having provoked the unrest.

Critics said Trump's remarks then belied his reluctance to alienate extreme right-wing organizations, whose followers constitute a devoted segment of his political base despite his disavowal of them.

> "By saying he is not taking sides, Donald Trump clearly is."
> Sen. Chuck Schumer

Yielding two days later to a mounting political furor over his initial response, Trump delivered a follow-up message expressly referring to the "KKK, neo-Nazis and white supremacists and other hate groups" as "repugnant to everything we hold dear as Americans."

Trump's detractors dismissed his revised statements as too little too late, but his remarks on Tuesday casting blame on both sides and suggesting that not everyone attending the rally was a white supremacist newly inflamed the controversy.

Former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke immediately applauded Trump on Twitter.

"Thank you President Trump for your honesty & courage to tell the truth about #Charlottesville & condemn the leftist terrorists in BLM/Antifa," Duke wrote, referring to Black Lives Matter (BLM) and anti-facists.

Democrats seized on Trump's latest words as evidence that Trump sees white nationalists and those protesting against them as morally equivalent.

"By saying he is not taking sides, Donald Trump clearly is," Democratic Senate leader Chuck Schumer of New York, said. "When David Duke and white supremacists cheer your remarks, you're doing it very, very wrong."

In a similar vein, Virginia Governor Terry McAuliffe, a Democrat, said Trump's characterization of the violence missed the mark.

"Neo-Nazis, Klansmen and white supremacists came to Charlottesville heavily armed, spewing hatred and looking for a fight. One of them murdered a young woman in an act of domestic terrorism, and two of our finest officers were killed in a tragic accident while serving to protect this community. This was not 'both sides,'" he said.

Richard Trumka, president of the AFL-CIO labor federation representing 12.5 million workers, became the latest member of Trump's advisory American Manufacturing Council to resign in protest, saying, "We cannot sit on a council for a president who tolerates bigotry and domestic terrorism," Trumka said. "President Trump's remarks today repudiate his forced remarks yesterday about the KKK and neo-Nazis." REUTERS

Trump's opinion of white nationalist groups has flip-flopped

In the days following the violent protests in Charlottesville, Virginia, President Trump has been giving the American public mixed signals when it comes to condemning white supremacy, neo-Nazis and the alt-right, but the ambiguity is nothing new for Trump.

Immediately after a 20-year-old pro-Nazi protester, Alex Fields Jr., rammed his car into a crowd of opposition marchers, killing Heather Heyer, Trump failed to denounce the hate groups, instead criticizing "violence on many sides."

On Monday, Trump again addressed the violent clashes between the Unite the Right marchers and liberal protesters, this time condemning the hate groups involved in the alt-right rally by name.

"Racism is evil — and those who cause violence in its name are criminals and thugs, including KKK, neo-Nazis, white supremacists and other hate groups, [and] are repugnant to everything we hold dear as Americans," Trump said, in his first unambiguous statement since the weekend protests.

That was until he spoke again Tuesday.

"I think there is blame on both sides," Trump said during a briefing at Trump Tower in Manhattan. He criticized the "alt-left" groups, claiming they too are "very, very violent."

"Many of those people were there to protest the taking down of the statue of Robert E. Lee," Trump said. "This week, it is Robert E. Lee and this week, Stonewall Jackson. Is it George Washington next? You have to ask yourself, where does it stop?" he said, noting that the first American president had owned slaves.

But this isn't the first time Trump has flip-flopped on his opinions toward white nationalist groups.

In 1991, Trump first shared his thoughts about infamous Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke, who had pulled nearly 39 percent of the vote in a Louisiana gubernatorial election. Duke lost, but in the interview with CNN's Larry King, Trump seemed to explain away the rampant racism.

"Did the David Duke thing bother you? Fifty-five percent of the whites in Louisiana voted for him," King said to Trump.

"I hate seeing what it represents, but I guess it just shows there's a lot of hostility in this country. There's a tremendous amount of hostility in the United States," Trump said.

"Anger?" King asked.

"It's anger. I mean, that's an anger vote. People are angry about what's happened. People are angry about the jobs. If you look at Louisiana, they're really in deep trouble. When you talk about the East Coast — it's not the East Coast. It's the East Coast, the middle coast, the West Coast …" Trump answered.

On the campaign, it was more of the same. While a campaign staffer was fired over a racist Facebook rant, and early on, Trump supported the removal of the Confederate flag from the South Carolina state capitol, he later claimed to not know who KKK leader Duke was when Duke told KKK members to throw their support to Trump on his radio show.

Despite his comments in the early 1990s, Trump at first said he "didn't know anything about David Duke," in an infamous exchange on CNN. Trump later blamed the comments on a "very bad earpiece." ERIN TIERNAN

In wake of Charlottesville, Cuomo changes state hate crimes law

In the first quarter of this year, there were 34 arrests in New York City involving hate crimes.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

In the wake of the weekend's violence at the white supremacist rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, Gov. Andrew Cuomo is making changes to the state's hate crimes laws.

"I am advancing legislation to add the crimes of inciting to riot and targeted rioting against people based on their identity, including race and ethnicity, to the list of specified offenses under New York's hate crimes law," the governor said in a statement Tuesday. "In addition, I'm calling on legislative action to amend the Human Rights Law to protect all public school students and institutions from discrimination."

The changes will be known as "the Charlottesville provisions" and will reiterate that while peaceful protests are permitted, "New York will never tolerate advocacy or the incitement of imminent violence against protected classes within our community," Cuomo added.

James Fields, a 20-year-old man said to be a Nazi sympathizer, was arrested after he mowed down counterprotesters in Charlottesville on Saturday, leaving one woman dead and 19 others injured.

Several others were arrested for their involvement in street fights that injured 15 people, and two state troopers were killed when their helicopter crashed.

The white supremacists converged on Charlottesville with torches Friday night to protest the removal of a Gen. Robert E. Lee statue on the main campus of the University of Virginia. Lee commanded the pro-slavery Confederate Army in the U.S. Civil War.

"The ugly events that took place in Charlottesville must never be repeated, and in New York, we are taking a united stand against hate in all of its forms," Gov. Cuomo said.

Manhattan DA Cyrus R. Vance applauded Cuomo's legislation.

"Domestic terrorism perpetrated by white supremacists and neo-Nazis has no place in this city, and will be prosecuted by this office," Vance said in a statement.

In the first quarter of 2017, there were 34 arrests involving hate crimes in the city, according to NYPD data. Broken down, 31 of those arrested were male and three were female; 15 were Hispanic, 12 were white and seven were black.

HelloFresh ending street program following complaints in Brooklyn

After receiving complaints from Brooklyn residents, HelloFresh will end its street team program throughout New York City, the company told CBS2 in a statement.

Many New Yorkers found the meal-delivery service's street solicitation efforts invasive, with one classifying their tactics as "borderline harassment" on Twitter.

Complaints — which go back to at least September 2016 on Twitter — include solicitors, who have been dubbed #HelloFreshZombies, following residents down the sidewalk and onto trains and buses or physically blocking them as they try to walk away.

HelloFresh's Twitter account has responded to some of the complaints with promises to pass them to its sales team manager, but on Tuesday, the company told CBS2 that the street teams will be phased out by Friday.

"We have recently been made aware of this unfortunate situation and have made the decision to shut down our street team program in the New York metro area," HelloFresh said. "We are committed to delivering a positive experience around home cooking to more people in a way that accurately reflects the HelloFresh brand, and anything else will not be tolerated."

Woman, three children injured by fallen tree in Central Park

City dwellers should be aware of what to do if they see a damaged tree.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

A woman and three children were injured after a tree fell on them in Central Park on Tuesday morning, city officials said.

The victims, whose identities have not yet been released, were inside the park on West Drive at 62nd Street when an elm tree collapsed onto the roadway around 10 a.m.

"Crews have mobilized immediately to clear the tree and investigate the incident," the NYC Parks & Recreation Department said in a statement.

The four victims were taken by ambulance to New York-Presbyterian/Weill Cornell Medical Center, where they are all in serious condition with injuries not considered life threatening, the FDNY told Metro just after noon.

All trees in the park are maintained by the Central Park Conservancy, the Parks Department said, adding that "crews are immediately inspecting trees in the vicinity for safety."

The Conservancy said in an email that workers are checking the trees "for health and safety" but did not offer further details about what that entails or what caused the elm tree to topple in the first place.

What to do if you see a damaged tree in New York City

Despite being the most populous area of the country, New York City is also home to roughly 30,000 acres of land that includes parks, beaches, gardens and Greenstreets.

That obviously includes a whole lot of trees that fall under the jurisdiction of city agencies like the Parks Department or Central Park Conservancy, but what happens if you see a damaged tree in the city proper?

You follow that safety adage of "If you see something, say something," of course, and here's how — and when — to make the call, according to the Parks Department.

Who to contact: Call 311 or visit nycgovparks.org/services/forestry.

Alert them if you see:

- a tree branch or limb that is cracked, fallen or looks like it might fall.
- a tree trunk that has split.
- a tree that is leaning, fallen or has been uprooted.
- a tree that is in declining or poor condition.

Once you make a report, you will be given a tracking number and details about how it will be addressed.

A Parks Inspector will then visit the tree to gauge its condition and the best plan of action, and forestry staff will be deployed as necessary.

Flags at half-staff to honor Brooklyn local killed in Iraq

A Brooklyn local was among two deaths in Iraq yesterday, the Department of Defense reported.

Sgt. Roshain Brooks, 30, died with Sgt. Aleen Stigler Jr., 22, in combat as a result of a blast that occurred in northern Iraq. Brooks was from Brooklyn, and Stigler was from Texas.

A statement appeared overnight from Col. Pat Work, Commander of the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, who remembered the sergeants in a Facebook post from the 82nd Airborne Division.

"Sergeant Brooks and Stigler were courageous patriots and Paratroopers who served our coalition and the people of Iraq with extraordinary commitment," said Col. Work.

According to the Facebook post, Brooks had joined the army only five years ago and became part of the 82nd Airborne Division in 2016. This was the first time Brooks had been deployed to Iraq and he had previously been deployed to Afghanistan.

"On behalf of all New Yorkers, I extend my deepest condolences to Sgt. Brooks' family, friends and fellow soldiers," Gov. Andrew Cuomo said in a statement that also directed all flags at state buildings to be flown at half-staff on Wednesday in honor of Sgt. Brooks. AMY RUSSO

The map shows the number of active hate groups by state. SOUTHERN POVERTY LAW CENTER

Track all the active hate groups in your area with this 'hate map'

There's a map that tracks all the hate groups in your city and state.

Last week, violence from members of white nationalist groups in Charlottesville, Virginia, left one individual dead and around 20 people injured, proving hate groups are very active in cities around the country.

In an effort to keep an ongoing record of the number of hate groups in the country, the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) created a hate group map that shows the steady increase of hate groups and which state they are in.

According to their interactive map, they have listed 917 organizations considered to be active hate groups.

The map lets you sort through a variety of different groups, including neo-Nazis, black separatists, anti-Muslim and Ku Klux Klan. There are 14 different groups you can choose and you can filter each group by state.

According to the SPLC, there are 47 total hate groups in New York.

Locally, the Loyal White Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are located in Hamptons Bay. The Golden Dawn neo-Nazi group is in Astoria, Queens, and the white nationalist group, American Freedom Partym, is in New York City. LENYON WHITAKER

Cabbie dies in cab, and no one noticed for 18 hours

Mehari Bokrezion's body was found at a designed rest stop for cabbies in SoHo last week. PIXABAY

New Yorkers live and traverse the city in close proximity to each other every day and rarely bat an eye at anything, often seeing something but saying nothing. That's likely why 59-year-old cab driver Mehari Bokrezion sat dead in his cab for 18 hours before someone dialed 911.

Bokrezion, who came to the United States from Eritrea, parked his cab at a designated rest stop for cabbies on Thompson Street in SoHo around 12:30 p.m. last Tuesday and soon passed away, The New York Times reported.

Countless people, from commuters and pedestrians to Bokrezion's fellow cab drivers, passed by without noticing, probably thinking he was just napping as cabbies often do in such rest spots. At 6:30 a.m. Wednesday, however, a passerby became concerned that Bokrezion hadn't moved and alerted 911.

Around the same time, Bokrezion's wife called Susan Maintenance Corp., her husband's employer since 1991, to say he never came home. The company's dispatcher, Franklin Lambert, told the Times he checked the cab's GPS and found the vehicle had been in the same spot for nearly 24 hours.

Lambert told Bokrezion's wife, who lived nearby and immediately went to the rest stop with her husband's brother and found Bokrezion's body.

EMS staff and police soon arrived and broke the window. Officials later determined that Bokrezion died of natural causes stemming from cardiovascular disease. NIKKI M. MASCALI

Justice Department demands information on anti-Trump protesters from DreamHost

Search warrant calls for turning over 1.3 million IP addresses and other identifying info.

ERIN TIERNAN
@ErinTiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

A web-hosting platform is fighting a Justice Department search warrant that would turn over information on over a million activists who helped organize protests against President Donald Trump on Inauguration Day.

It would mean giving the government 1.3 million IP addresses of visitors to the website, as well as names, addresses, email addresses, photos, payment information and domain registration details, the company said.

"That information could be used to identify any individuals who used this site to exercise and express political speech protected under the Constitution's First Amendment," the company said in a blog post announcing the legal battle Monday. "That should be enough to set alarm bells off in anyone's mind. This is, in our opinion, a strong example of investigatory overreach and a clear abuse of government authority."

At the center of the requests is disruptj20.org, a website hosted by DreamHost that helped anti-Trump activists "building the framework needed for mass protests to shut down the inauguration of Donald Trump."

The Justice Department's reasons for the investigation are unclear — affidavits are sealed, but more than 200 people were indicted on felony rioting chargesfollowing the historic protests of Trump's administration.

DreamHost said it has "been working with the Department of Justice for months to comply with legal process," but called the warrant a "highly untargeted demand that chills free association and the right of free speech afforded by the Constitution."

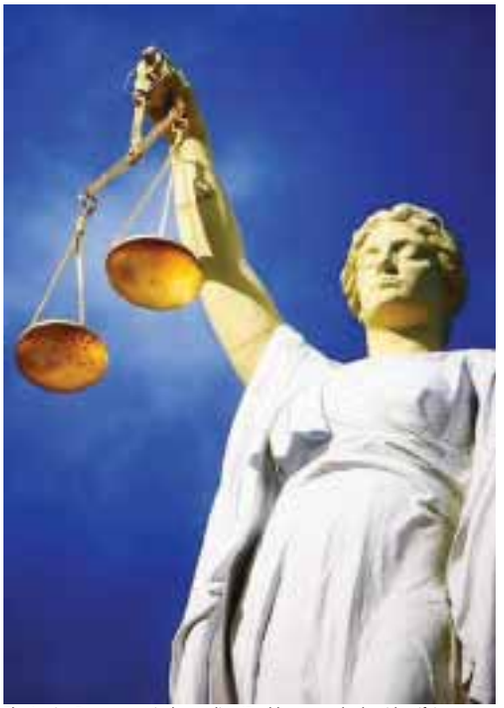
Prosecutors obtained a search warrant for the records July 12 and are now asking a federal judge to force the company to turn over the information. The company is challenging the request on the grounds that it is overly vague. A hearing is scheduled for Friday in Washington.

The warrant demands "all files" in DreamHost's possession including on "subscribers" to disruptj20.org and people who "participated, planned, organized or incited the Inauguration Day protests."

"In essence, the search warrant not only aims to identify the political dissidents of the current administration, but attempts to identify and understand what content each of these dissidents viewed on the website," the company said in a legal filing arguing against the warrant.

In an earlier filing, the Justice Department said, "DreamHost's opinion of the breadth of the warrant does not provide it with a basis for refusing to comply with the Court's search warrant and begin an immediate production."

The U.S. attorney's office in Washington told CNN on Tuesday that beyond its earlier court filings, it had no further comment.



The Justice Department is demanding IP addresses and other identifying information on the organizers of the anti-Trump Inauguration Day protests.

Slogans shouted at Charlottesville may not have been protected speech

White supremacist groups rally in Emancipation Park during the Unite the Right Rally on Saturday. GETTY IMAGES

The First Amendment only goes so far, according to some legal experts.

MICHAEL MARTIN
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

First Amendment experts say that epithets and slogans chanted by white supremacists at Charlottesville last weekend may have crossed the line into unprotected speech, Vox reported.

In 1942, the Supreme Court ruled that "fighting words" are not protected under the First Amendment. The justices defined fighting words as "those which by their very utterance inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace." General terms that are anti-Semitic and anti-immigrant don't meet the definition, but some experts say that when right-wing demonstrators used "n—r" and "f—t," they can be interpreted as fighting words because a reasonable person could be expected to retaliate.

"The most extreme of last weekend's outrageous utterances in Charlottesville would be easy to deem unprotected," Robert O'Neill, a First Amendment scholar and former director of the Thomas Jefferson Center for the Protection of Free Expression at the University of Virginia, told Vox.

Some chants heard during Friday night's rally included "One people, one nation, end immigration," "Jews will not replace us" and "white lives matter." But journalists reported hearing more specific epithets such as "Go back to Africa" and "F— you, fa—ts."

Those may not be protected forms of speech. "You could make the case that it was an insulting epithet, obviously a slur and racist comment that would provoke someone to retaliate," said Caroline Mala Corbin, a constitutional law professor at the University of Miami.

Slogans shouted at public demonstrations can muddy the waters, because demonstrators could contend that their slurs weren't directed at a particular person, but "most fighting-words cases involve one-on-one, face-to-face insults," said David Hudson, a First Amendment expert and law professor at Vanderbilt University.

Several court cases offer precedent, reported Vox: In 2001, a man called a woman the N-word and threw an empty soda can at her in public; an Arizona appeals court found this was not protected speech.

In 2003, a Wisconsin court made the same ruling after a woman on a nude beach was called a "whore," "harlot" and "Jezebel." In 2010, a North Dakota court ruled against a teen who called a black girl the N-word at a dance and again at a restaurant. The defendant's attorney argued that saying the N-word was not a crime.

Although the First Amendment protects use of the epithet, said the court, "an objectively reasonable person would find the totality of [the defendant's] statements constituted explicit and implicit threats that were likely to incite a breach of the peace or violent reaction and alarm the listener."

Should you take vitamins and supplements at all? All signs point to no

Why supplements do more harm than good.

MEAGAN MORRIS
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

The industry producing vitamins and supplements is a $37 billion dollar business powered, in part, by celebrities like Jennifer Aniston who gulp down vitamins by the handful.

'I've got a healthy bag of vitamins I take three times a day, like Viviscal and your basic omegas and vitamin C," Aniston told People of her regimen.

She's not alone: Khloe Kardashian once posted a photo of her extensive vitamin regimen, and Goop founder Gwyneth Paltrow recently launched a series of "vitamin protocols" — or packets of vitamins — for $90 a pop.

Do they know something we don't? No, according to an increasing number of health experts speaking out against supplements.

"The message is simple: Most supplements do not prevent chronic disease or death, their use is not justified, and they should be avoided," a group of doctors from Johns Hopkins, the University of Warwick, and the American College of Physicians wrote in a 2014 editorial published in the Annals of Internal Medicine.

"This message is especially true for the general population with no clear evidence of micronutrient deficiencies, who represent most supplement users in the United States and in other countries," they added.

Supplements are defined by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration as "intended to add further nutritional value to the diet," and aren't regulated like other drugs — the FDA doesn't even check into them unless a number of people experience bad side effects. There are plenty of people who experience these side effects, too: A 2016 study published in the New England Journal of Medicine found 23,005 people visited the emergency room because of supplements.

Some supplements can even interact with medication, rendering it useless.

"It basically overmetabolized the antibiotics so they weren't in her system in the correct dose," Pouya Jamshidi, a resident at Weill Cornell Medical College, told Business Insider of a pregnant patient who couldn't kick her tuberculosis because of the St. John's Wort supplement she was taking.

"The trouble is most people don't consider it a medication because you don't need a prescription for it, and so she didn't tell us."

And the supplement inside the bottle might not even be made of what the label claims. In 2015, the New York state attorney general warned four manufacturers of supplements sold in stores like Walmart, Walgreens and Target that they could face legal action for mislabeling supplements like ginkgo biloba, St. John's Wort and valerian root. Tests into the supplements found no trace of the herbs in the pills, but found that they did contain powdered beans, rice and wild carrots. Other supplements tested found ingredients like peanuts and soybeans, both foods that can be deadly in people allergic to them.

There's a reason certain vitamins and minerals are considered "essential" for our bodies: We can't live without them. However, these vitamins and minerals should come from diet first.

"We use vitamins as insurance policies against whatever else we might (or might not) be eating, as if by atoning for our other nutritional sins, vitamins can save us from ourselves," Catherine Price, a science reporter, wrote in her book Vitamania.

Study after study shows that vitamin supplements don't do much to keep people alive longer — and it's surprisingly easy to "overdose" on vitamins.

Your best bet: Skip the expensive pee, eat more fruits and vegetables and only take a supplement if your doctor recommends it.

Supplements are defined by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration as "intended to add further nutritional value to the diet" and aren't regulated like other drugs. GETTY IMAGES

Why Aren't Doctors Telling About These Two Often

Two Advanced Medical Treatments Every Knee Arthritis Sufferer

New York City, New York

NY Pain MD* is a medical group with locations in Midtown NYC and Downtown NYC that has treated thousands of knee arthritis and joint pain patients.

Here is what every knee arthritis sufferer should know about the best treatments and options available today. Including when and why you should consider each of these 2 treatment approaches to get maximum results.

If you suffer with knee or other join arthritis pain, you have probably already tried many treatments ... especially countless pain medications. Experienced doctors understand that, even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for knee arthritis pain... they are rarely the answer over the longer term.

In most cases they have minimal results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are There Any Better Options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there are two very good options for knee arthritis to help relieve the pain.

There are two options that many knee arthritis sufferers have never heard of.

Before we get into the two treatments, please understand this...

NY Pain MD is a well established medical clinic that has treated thousands of knee arthritis sufferers and joint and back pain sufferers. Patients travel from all over the area and even several states away from NYC to be treated at one of their clinics because they want the best medical treatments available. What you are about to discover are two REAL medical treatments. Not miracle cures you see on infomercials or non -medicial treatments promoted on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no cure for arthritis. But there are these two treatments that have already helped thousands of knee arthritis sufferers - possibly just like you.

The first treatment is more common than the second. Even if you have heard of this treatment - or even tried it without good results - please read this. You will find out why it may not have worked for you and how you may be able to get much better results.

#1 Viscosupplementation

Viscosupplementation has gained quite a bit of popularity in recent years and it has gotten mixed results for a couple of reasons.

But before we get into that,here's what you need to know about viscosupplementation.

When you have arthritis, you suffer a decrease in the lubrication fluids in your knee.

In other words, your knee joints basically "dries up."

The lubricating fluid that decreases is called "synovial fluid." Pharmaceutical companies (with the help of scientists) can now make natural synovial fluid gel-like compounds that, during viscosupplementation, treatments... doctors can precisely introduce directly into the knee and other joints.

This helps replace the lubricating fluid to the knee joint - allowing it to move more freely and smoothly and often decreasing or even eliminating the pain.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

But There Is A BIG Problem

The key is the treatment must be EXTREMELY PRECISE. If the injection is slightly off, the medication will not get into the knee joint and the treatment will not work.

That's why the experts at NY Pain MD use Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology or P.A.T.T. so they can actually see the medicine going directly into the knee joint during the treatment.

Research shows that doctors performing joint injections without imaging technology can miss the joint as much as 30% of the time.

If you have tried viscosupplementation without this imaging technology and without good results - this may very well be why.

That's why NY Pain MD takes it even one step further. They do not just use one-step process of advanced imaging during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

Another Important Factor

Viscosupplementation medications also come in several different "brands" or formulas. Like all medications, some people respond better to one than another. So, the experts at NY Pain MD use several and great effort is taken to figure out what is the best one for YOU.

One last thing: The experts at NY Pain MD have found that earlier you start Viscosupplementation the better.

This is most likely because the longer you wait - the more joint destuction takes place.

That's why NY Pain MD is now seeing so many patients as young as 35 to 40.

Summary: If you have arthritis pain and have not tried Viscosupplementation you should look into it as soon as possible.

If you have tried it without good results. you may still be able to get great results with the proper targeted imaging and specific medication.

What Should You Do If Viscosupplementation Fails?

When conservative treatment, including viscosupplementation fails ... most knee arthritis sufferers believe their only option is total knee replacement surgery.

This is not true...and here is why

There is another treatment for serious knee arthritis pain most people (and even doctors) do not know about.

#2: Radiofrequency Treatment

This treatment is technically called, "Radiofrequency Neurotomy." Or RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

ADVERTISEMENT

Knee Arthritis Suffers Successful Treatments?

Needs To Know - Before Or After Knee Replacement Surgery

Several branches of nerves that surround the knee are know as "genicular nerves."

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to the genicular nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerve from transmitting pain signals.

There are two distinct parts to this treatment. First, a test, diagnostic "G Block" proce-dure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, then one two week later, Radio Frequen-cy waves are applied for long term relief.

Is It Safe?

Research has shown this to provide relief for patients and the to procedure to be safe and effective.

One study published Novem-ber 4, 2010 in the journal Pain found that RF treated subjects on average "achieved at least 50% knee pain relief at 1,4 and 12 weeks, respective-ly. No patient reported a post procedure adverse event during the follow-up period. Some studies indicate some patients may get years of relief in some cases. " RF neu rotomy (radio frequency treatment) of genicular nerves leads to sig ificant pain reduction and functional improvement in a subset of elderly chronic knee osteoarthritis pain, and thus may be an effective treatment in such cases."

It should also be mentioned that, like all procedures, results will vary patient to patient.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and viscosupple-mentation do not offer good enough results.

RF can be utilized before resorting to total knee replacement. RF allows many patients to avoid knee replacement surgery.

RF has also been found effective AFTER knee replacement surgery when the patient still feels pain.

The pain after a failed knee replacement surgery can be de-bilitating and this procedure can be the only thing that helps and provided relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treat-ment or not.

Many experts suggest choos-ing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most ad-vanced technology all under one roof.

Advanced Treatment Uses Medical Radio Frequency Waves To Relieve Pain

Science rescues knee arthritis sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many. Many patients still in pain after a knee replacement may respond very well to these treatments allowing the possibility of avoiding additional surgery.

This way, the doctors work-ing on your case can give you a proper examination and advise the best possible treatment plan for your indi-vidual case.

Several experts work as a team to offer you the best treatment options at the appropriate time to maxi-mize results. It is also very convenient to have all your doctors and treatments in one place. Traveling to dif-ferent offices can be time consuming and even more expensive.

NY Pain MD believes this "X" factor is one of the reasons so many knee arthritis sufferes travel from all over to be treated at their advanced medicial clinics.

NY Pain MD offers a limited number of complimentary knee arthritis treatment screen-ings every month. These screenings are a way for knee arthritis sufferers to get some of their ques-tions answered and see if they are a candidate for one of the cutting-edge treatments offered at NY Pain MD

If you would like a compli-mentary screening, just call 855-456-PAIN [7246] and tell the scheduling coordi-nator "I would like a complimentary knee arthritis screening." The screenings fill up fast every month. If you do not call in time to get one this month, the schedul-ing coordiantators will get you appointed for next month

This screening is no cost and no obligation. Many of the treatments offered are covered by many insurance plans and Medicare

There's another KKW beauty snafu

More of the same, really.

If Kim Kardashian thought people weirdly accusing her of blackface in her KKW ads was bad, she probably wasn't expecting this latest round of tomfoolery.

The reality star has received flack some beauty blogger named Jeffree Star after showing off her new powder contour kits on Snapchat. Basically she doesn't know how to swatch, which, I don't either! But like, I don't own and aggressively peddle my own makeup line, so.

After Star criticized the swatches for looking "like chalk," her fans sent a lot of hate his way. But mostly because he made racist remarks 12 years ago that he later apologized for.

Kardashian was swift with her response. "I get that it's a serious deal if you say like racial things, but I do believe in people changing, and people that apologize, I will give them the benefit of the doubt," she said.

The lesson here? That if you were racist 12 years ago, but you apologized, you're all right by Kim Kardashian. Neat-o!

Mindy opens up about baby friend

Mindy Kaling is finally saying words about the baby inside of her!

"The Mindy Project" actress finally confirms, out of her own lips, that she is indeed pregnant and that she's "really excited" about it. "It's so unknown to me," she says. "I have a lot of control over a lot of aspects of my life, and this is one where I'm like, 'OK, it's out of my hands,' which is kind of a fun feeling."

She's also looking forward to finally being able to criticize other people with babies, which I think is probably the only reason people have kids in the first place, right? "It's so easy to criticize parenting until you're a parent. So one of the nice things about becoming a parent is that I'll be able to openly criticize other parenting because I will have a child." LOL, Mindy still got it.

Finally!

How Amandla Stenberg learned about Trump's win

Can you even imagine?

Amandla Stenberg — one of those teens I know I should be into, but I always forget — is saying some pretty sensible stuff in a new issue of Teen Vogue.

The 18-year-old sat down with singer Janelle Monae to talk about racism, Trump and black-girl magic, and y'all know I'm here for it.

But most important, she found out Trump got elected from a dude in a Nazi uniform. Can you even?

"I was shooting a scene in 'Where Hands Touch,' a film about a biracial girl growing up during the Holocaust," she says. "An actor playing a Nazi soldier took out his phone to refresh the news and announced that Trump was president. … Immediately, I excused myself because I felt like I couldn't breathe anymore. I started sobbing."

Girl, same. Except the Nazi part. There were no people dressed as Nazis at the Brooklyn bar I was probably at, guzzling my worries away.

Why Oprah never let Stedman put a ring on it

Oprah Winfrey and her partner, Stedman Graham, have been together for 31 years. That is approximately an infinite loop in celebrity years! But Winfrey admits that they have no plans on ever getting married, because they're perfectly happy, like, not being married.

Also, to be fair, marriage has only come up once between the pair. "Nobody believes it, but it's true. The only time I brought it up was when I said to Stedman, 'What would have happened if we had actually gotten married?' And the answer is: 'We wouldn't be together.'" Damn girl!

"We would not have stayed together, because marriage requires a different way of being in this world. His interpretation of what it means to be a husband and what it would and what it would mean for me to be a wife would have been pretty traditional, and I would not have been able to fit into that," Winfrey said. Goals, as per usual.

Mark Hamill hints at plot of 'Last Jedi'

The next "Star Wars" movie will give us more answers about Luke Skywalker's role in how Ben Solo became Kylo Ren.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Mark Hamill revealed that a huge mistake by Luke Skywalker is what led Kylo Ren to join the dark side of the Force, confirming that "Star Wars: The Last Jedi" will explore the guilt and weight he still feels in the wake of this betrayal.

While we only briefly saw Luke Skywalker right at the end of "Star Wars: The Force Awakens," during the film we learned he'd tried to train his nephew, Ben Solo (Adam Driver), in the ways of the Jedi, only for him to be seduced by evil, turn into Kylo Ren and kill his father, Han Solo (Harrison Ford).

Luke Skywalker's response to his failure to re-establish the Jedi order was to run away to the distant planet of Ahch-To, which is where Rey (Daisy Ridley) found him at the end of "The Force Awakens." Their relationship will be explored in "The Last Jedi," while we'll also learn more about what went wrong with Ben Solo.

"[Luke] made a huge mistake in thinking that his nephew was the chosen one, so he invested everything he had in Kylo, much like Obi-Wan did with my character. And he is betrayed, with tragic consequences. Luke feels responsible for that," Hamill told Entertainment Weekly.

"That's the primary obstacle he has to rejoining the world and his place in the Jedi hierarchy, you know? It's that guilt, that feeling that it's his fault, that he didn't detect the darkness in him until it was too late."

But don't expect "The Last Jedi" to fully delve into this backstory, because Hamill also revealed that most of it will be "left to your imagination."

Hamill admitted that writer and director Rian Johnson only made him privy to this information for the actor's "own process."

Hamill added, "I talked with Rian about it and went into this elaborate scenario of what happened to Luke after the end of 'Return Of The Jedi.'"

We'll learn what really happened between Luke Skywalker and Ben Solo/Kylo Ren when "Star Wars: The Last Jedi" is released on Dec. 15.

"The Last Jedi" will answer why Ben Solo became Kylo Ren.

Liam Gallagher: 'I don't understand myself'

We chat with the English musician, singer and songwriter.

NATALIA WYSOCKA, MWN in Montreal
letters@metro.us

Liam Gallagher has a fiery reputation. When he introduces himself, he wears his forever dark sunglasses and a long Stone Island coat that he just bought the morning of our interview. He does not like wearing shirts when on stage and prefers "comfortable" clothing. This is, however, perhaps the only visibly comfortable aspect of the founding member of the rock band Oasis. No longer in the band, the singer is known for his mood swings and battles with Noel, his older brother and former bandmate. We caught up with the 44-year-old in Montreal to chat about his relationship with Noel Gallagher, future plans and life.

Last year, Netflix produced the documentary "Supersonic," which traces your life and Noel's, from the beginning of Oasis to 1996. Do you have the impression that this movie has allowed more people to understand you better, both as a person and as an artist?
Hmmm, I'm not sure. ... I don't know. Maybe you'll understand me a bit more. But even me, I don't understand myself. See what I mean? So, I wish you good luck! I know what my goal is. I'm not there to raise spirits, go life! I'm not an enthusiast of life. But it's a good documentary. I like it. I'm glad I did it.

You sell a T-shirt that reads, "Who the f–k is Liam Gallagher," a nod to Keith Richards' famous T-shirt, which reads, "Who the hell is Mick Jagger?" Do you ask yourself this question?
Ah, completely! I know who I am, but ... what comes first, the egg or the chicken, right? What came first? Do I ask myself this question or do I answer it? I think I know who I am. Yes. I think I know. But I'm still learning. You never finish discovering your own stupidities, do you know what I mean?

During the Oasis years, the media put a lot of emphasis on your internal battles and your endless disputes with your brother. Do you think, in the midst of all this, they forgot about your humor? Because, despite everything, you have a great sense of humor! And love? And the fellowship that united you guys?
We had a lot of love, a lot of humor. Yes. Sometimes we had little fights. But I would say that 90 percent of the time I spent with Oasis was momentous. I lived sublime moments — sacred, magnificent. And the remaining 10 percent was awful. I have very good memories.

Do you plan to ever regroup the band?
My plan is to live my life. And one day, with a little hope, my brother and I will be brothers. That is all. What is Oasis? What is it? Oasis is Noel and me. If we do not understand each other, there is no Oasis. If we do understand each other, then possibly Oasis will return. But the important thing is that we will be brothers again.

Do you think this will happen?
Right now, no.

During your show in Montreal, you asked several times: "Are there any Oasis fans here? Where are the Oasis fans?" First of all, do you want to play for them? Even with your personal project?
Ehhh. I am well aware that people come to see me because I am part of Oasis, or at least, because I was a part. And because I play our old songs ["Rock 'n' Roll Star," "Wonderwall," "Morning Glory," "Slide Away"]. They do not really come to hear the new material. I'm aware of this! I know there are Oasis fans in the crowd. I am happy to see them.

You will release a new album in October called "As You Were." In the beginning, it was going to be called "Bold". What happened?
We did a bit of brainstorming. And we said that "As You Were," had character. Much more character. It's better, I think.

For this album, you worked with new collaborators, including Andrew Wyatt of Miike Snow. Was it disconcerting?
Yes, yes. We went to Los Angeles to write. We wrote "Wall of Glass," "Paper Crown" and "Come Back to Me." Three songs in three days. All excellent. I love them deeply. It was easy to do. I thought it would be an absolute nightmare. Meet with people I did not know, try to compose music with them. But it was as if we had known each other forever, do you know what I mean?

The year 2014 marked the end of Beady Eye, the group that you formed in 2010 after the dissolution of Oasis. It was there, you said, where you really felt the impact of the first separation. Was it a big shock?
Yes, because I did not really have the time to meditate on what happened, about our separation. With Beady Eye, I kept making music with my friends, doing tours. It was not perhaps something big, maybe even small, but when Beady Eye ended, I realized, "S–t." Hell. It was me, between four walls, without the band. It wasn't a good time.

And how did you come out of that?
How did I get out of there? I have a good [girlfriend] who kept motivating me. "Come on, man, stop whining, stop pitying your luck. You're worth more than this." She pushed me in the right direction, introduced me into the world and I imagine that, deep in my spirit, I always saw that everything was fine.

Was that the moment you realized how incredibly popular Oasis was, incredibly fast?
I never considered it. I was really bored. That was the worst part. I had nothing to do. I did not have a band. I did not need to get up in the morning. I had no rehearsals, no tours, no studio. The worst thing in life is boredom. Boredom kills. Now, I have things to do, a new band, concerts to come to. Everything returned to normal.

Getting on stage, is it still your favorite activity?
It's an amazing thing. To play songs for people who want to hear my voice. I feel very fortunate to be able to do that.

be confident.

Smorgasburg is coming to SoHo

Brooklyn's trendy outdoor food market opens in Manhattan this weekend.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Manhattan's own edition of Smorgasburg has set an opening date and announced its list of vendors.

Beginning Saturday, Aug. 19, Brooklyn's biggest outdoor food market — and premier showcase for the city's next big food trends — expands to SoHo with Smorg Square at Varick and Canal streets.

The original plan was to have six vendors open all week, with the roster growing to 20 on the weekends. Instead, new market will only be open Friday-Sunday with the full complement of 20 vendors, including many Smorgasburg hits one of Metro's favorite newcomers of 2017 John's Juice, whose colorful drinks served in hollowed-out watermelons and dragon fruit are the must-have Instagram of the summer, plus Dan & John's Wings, Ramen Burger and Wowfulls.

New vendors will also pop up regularly, and Smorg Square will take on a night market feel on Fridays and Saturdays when it stays open until 10 p.m. Come September, a full outdoor bar will offer drinks.

Unlike its Brooklyn branches in East River State Park (Saturday) and Prospect Park (Sunday), Smorg Square will weather the winter outdoors, remaining open in November and December. Its sister market across the street, Brooklyn Flea, will transform into a holiday market.

Bringing some charm to the open plot next to busy Canal Street was a daunting task, with owners Eric Demby and Jonathan Butler enlisting the help of design firm A+I to bring a piazza-like ambiance to the square and Children's Museum of the Arts students to decorate part of the perimeter fence.

Find Smorg Square at 76 Varick St. on Friday and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., and on Sundays from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Kick it like the tropics

We've rounded up five great places to grab a cocktail in honor of National Rum Day. EVA KIS

Big Poppa

It takes experienced food industry people to create a spot that's all homey comfort. Esther & Carol — named after the owners' moms — just opened this May in Nolita from Kevin King (Balthazar) and Cordell Lochin (La Esquina), with some help from Dave Oz of Bathtub Gin. Upstairs, it's all 1940s-era Americana fare with a healthy bent, but head down the graffiti-covered stairwell and suddenly you're in the basement garage of your dreams with a stage where anyone may turn up. Kick back in a red leather banquette with a cocktail that's a damn sight better than whatever you mixed up from your parents' liquor cabinet: the Big Poppa, with Mt. Gay Black Barrel and Smith & Cross rums, crème de banana, almond orgeat, lime, angostura bitters and nutmeg.

341 Broome St., estherandcarolnyc.com

Zombie

Long Island City's Ravel Hotel opened its new rooftop Profundo Pool Club just in time for the warmest month of summer, with a Bali-inspired deck and a 20-foot pool. While there's a perfectly summer-worthy blueberry-rum drink on the menu, it's their resurrection of a tiki classic that caught our eye. Blending silver, dark and spiced rums, the Zombie will certainly turn you into, well, something less than fully conscious if you have more than two. But it's also got some fun New York history: Though invented at Don the Beachcomber in California, it rose to fame at the 1939 World's Fair in Queens. The pool club keeps it classic with falernum (the sweet, nutty syrup that gives Caribbean drinks their richness), grapefruit juice, Donn's mix, Pernod and lime.

Open through Sept. 17, 8-08 Queens Plaza S., profundopoolclub.com

Perfect Daiquiri

The Dead Rabbit may have been founded by a couple of lads from Northern Ireland, but they've proven they can make tropical drinks with the best of 'em, too. Blacktail, the Cuban-themed follow-up to their best-in-the-world bar, just earned its own accolades as Best New American Cocktail Bar at this year's edition of the Oscars of drinking, Tales of the Cocktail. Its signature Perfect Daiquiri was a team effort led by head bartender Jesse Vida, using a blend of rums. "Obviously, we don't get Cuban product in the States, so we do a blend of four white rums from Panama, Guyana, Haiti and Barbados," he says. "We also do flavor variations of banana, strawberry and pineapple by doing fruit sous vide infusions." If you've been before, check it out again — they just revamped the whole menu.

Second floor of Pier A Harbor House, 22 Battery Place, blacktailnyc.com

Chinatown Daiquiri

You don't need a special reason to check out Slowly Shirley, the Old Hollywood-inspired subterranean cocktail bar by two heavies of the drinking world, Jim Kearns (Pegu Club) and Jon Neidich (ACME). That said, rum fans should take note that this week through Aug. 20, they're serving a special daiquiri menu all about the dark spirit of the islands. Or opt for the staple Chinatown Daiquiri, which starts with Appleton Reserve rum and incorporates the neighborhood's flavors (plus a fortune cookie garnish) with Sriracha-strawberry puree, and honey and ginger syrups for a drink you won't soon forget.

121 W. 10th St., slowlyshirley.com

Cold Brew Coffee Swizzle

If you've only been putting whiskey in your coffee, try it the Johnny Swet way at The Skylark. The mixologist turned summer's hottest drink trend — cold brew coffee — into a mellow way to wind down your afternoon. The Cold Brew Coffee Swizzle mixes Sailor Jerry rum and coconut liquor with coffee steeped overnight, topped with a coconut milk float and slices of real coconut. Sip it with colleagues after work in the bar's upscale indoor lounge or take it out onto their patio looking out at Midtown from 30 floors up.

Now you can paint your walls in Prince purple

Pantone's new eggplant shade, "Love Symbol # 2," honors the late singer's legacy.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

Prince in "Purple Rain."
WARNER BROTHERS

In the no good, very bad year of 2016, we lost Prince. The beloved pop star passed away in April of that year at the age of 57, but his legacy lives on through his music and the memory of his nonconformist, spirited approach to life. And now, there's another way to conjure the vibes of the prolific songwriter: "the Purple One" is getting his own signature color.

On Monday, the Pantone Color Institute and the Prince Estate announced the "Love Symbol #2," a custom shade of purple to honor and remember him by.

Since his 1984 film "Purple Rain," the singer has been associated with all things purple and even gained the nickname "the Purple One." The seven-time Grammy-winner was known for wearing lavish all-purple suits, playing a purple guitar — and of course there's the song "Purple Rain," which helmed the film's soundtrack and won Prince an Oscar for Best Original Song score. He was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2004.

The brand has named the custom color after the symbol Prince changed his name to in 1993 after a dispute with Warner Brothers. The unpronounceable glyph was eventually copyrighted as "Love Symbol #2"; after his contract with the company ended, he changed his name back. Pantone drew inspiration for the hue from the star's purple Yamaha piano, which he had planned to take on tour before his death, according to the artist's estate.

"The color purple was synonymous with who Prince was and will always be. This is an incredible way for his legacy to live on forever," Troy Carter, entertainment adviser to Prince's estate, said in a statement.

If you're feeling blue, why not turn your walls Prince purple, put on some hits and dance it out? We need all the good vibes we can get.

In a rut? Adding a fresh coat of paint — or opting for a brand new color — is always a good way to liven up any space and, by extension, clear the cobwebs from your head. But what about experimenting with wallpaper? It's less messy and time-consuming, and you get to add a pattern instead of just a color. From removable swaths you roll on yourself to brighten up a small space, to large murals that transform an entire room, here are three wallpaper companies that offer prints and patterns that to your fancy.

Flavor Paper

This Brooklyn-based company creates both digital and screen-printed wallpapers, with over 150 designs to choose from. You can custom design your own, or select from categories like "floral," "geometric" and "funky." If you're filling a big space, opt for a mural, which starts at 80 square feet minimum. If you're looking for something less permanent, EZ Papes might be more your speed. They come with a water-activated paste so all you have to do is dip the prints in water and roll it on the wall. (They're water strippable for easy removal). Don't miss the Andy Warhol x Flavor Paper collab. And there's even scratch 'n sniff, people! Flavorpaper.com

Nature-themed peel 'n stick wallpapers from Etsy shop Jumanjii
INSTAGRAM.COM/JUMANJIIWALLPAPERS

Jumajii on Etsy

Etsy is a great resource for independently-designed and affordable wallpaper. We like the shop Jumanjii, which boasts bright and colorful "jungle-themed" nature prints like banana leaves, blooming cactus and coconuts. It's all removable and self-adhesive — peel 'n stick — so you can take it down at any time. Sizing starts at 20 by 48 inches ($37), if you want to add a swath of color to a small space. You even have the option of ordering washable wallpaper. etsy.com/shop/jumanjii

Nottene

Philly design studio Nottene specializes in hand-drawn screen-printed papers, which look more like illustrations than prints. From gold-inked constellations to a rendering of different-style homes done in ballpoint pen, the work is subtle and varied. You can request a custom design as well. It's available to order as a sample, (8 by 10 inches, $6), print (18 by 24 inches, $50) or by the roll (27 inches by 15 feet, $175). nottene.net

Stars, they're just like us: Price-chop edition

A host of Westchester and Fairfield counties' most notable personalities gave markdowns to their listings.

TheRealDeal.com is a daily blog and monthly magazine covering real estate in the New York metro area.

THE REAL DEAL

Bucolic estates. Serene escapes. Historic farmhouses with every modern convenience and more. For decades, these kinds of homes have drawn the rich and famous away from the hustle and bustle of New York City to Westchester and Fairfield counties. But these days, many of the most gossip-worthy residents seem to be on their way out of the northern suburbs. It looks as though some savvy buyers might just profit from their departures.

James Comey and his wife sold their seven-bedroom, nine-bathroom home at 6 Westway Rd. for $575,000 less than the $3 million they paid for it in 2010, when Comey was the general counsel at one of the world's largest hedge funds, Bridgewater Associates. The 7,157-square-foot manse and its 3-acre plot first went on the market for $3.4 million in 2015, but Comey got the memo, dropping the price four times to make a deal.

Cable news odd couple Mika Brzezinski and Joe Scarborough didn't announce they are a real-life engaged couple until May, but Brzezinski's Bronxville home at 6 Summit Ave. was put on the market in February for $2.1 million. She bought the 4,102-square-foot Tudor in 2012 with then-husband James Hoffer for $1.9 million. After three months and a slight price reduction, the sale closed for $2.05 million.

Time after time, we're seeing high-end homes in Connecticut's leafy suburbs suffer in a soft market. And that might keep Cyndi Lauper up all through the night. The pop legend was looking to sell her North Stamford home for $1.25 million in May, but by June she'd had a change of heart, cutting the price to $1.08 million. Lauper and husband Dave Thornton bought the 3,885-square-foot, three-bedroom home at 250 Saddle Hill Rd. in the 1980s. It was built by Nine West co-founder Vince Camuto, and its true colors were chosen by the founder of French Country, Howard Kaplan. The property includes a storybook guest house-turned-music studio, where she (used to) bop. Michael Leventhal of Berkshire Hathaway Home Services has the listing. JAMES KLATELL

Breaking down the Knicks 2017-18 schedule: Top games to watch for

The NBA released its full schedule on Monday night. Here are the games Knicks fans should watch for.

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Will Carmelo Anthony still be a Knick when the season kicks off in October? GETTY IMAGES

The NBA released its regular-season schedule for all of its teams on Monday night as excitement for a new year of basketball continues to build.

While there isn't much expected from the rebuilding New York Knicks in 2017-18, there are still plenty of aspects to anticipate, whether it be the further development of Kristaps Porzingis or the debut of first-round pick Fran Ntilikina.

Regardless of record, one of the most basketball-hungry cities in the world will have their eyes glued to the Knicks all season.

Here is a look at some games to watch this season:

Knicks vs. Detroit Pistons: Sat., Oct. 21, 8 p.m. (Home opener)
The Madison Square Garden faithful will get their first chance of the new season to see their heroes live when the Knicks take on Stan Van Gundy's Detroit Pistons.

Knicks vs. Houston Rockets
Wed., Nov. 1, 8 p.m.
Whether or not Carmelo Anthony is still on their roster, New York's first meeting of the season with the Houston Rockets is sure to be an interesting one.

This is the only team that Anthony is willing to waive his no-trade clause for, but the Rockets simply don't have the pieces to get acquire the 10-time All-Star straight up. That means a third or fourth team has to be relied on to facilitate a deal in order for it to actually happen.

Either way, we could see Anthony playing alongside Chris Paul and James Harden in Houston, or he could playing against the team he's been yearning to play for.

NYK vs. Philadelphia 76ers
Mon., Dec. 25, noon
The Knicks have become a Christmas-Day tradition despite their mediocrity over the past two decades. But they will be kicking off the day's festivities against the Philadelphia 76ers, a team that finally looks to be emerging from the harrowing rebuild that placed them at the bottom of the NBA standings for years.

NYK @ Dallas Mavericks
Sun., Jan. 7, 7 p.m.
This game's importance will rely on the development of 19-year-old Ntilikina, who the Knicks took with the eighth-overall pick of the 2017 draft.

With the following selection, Dallas took N.C. State's Dennis Smith Jr., a prospect deemed more NBA-ready who could have a more successful future in the league. The Knicks could get a harsh, up-close-and-personal look at what might have been should Smith star upon his debut.

Breaking down the Nets 2017-18 schedule: What to keep an eye on

The NBA released its full schedule on Monday night. Here's a look at which games Nets fans should watch for.

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Once again, the Brooklyn Nets are working toward something better in the future.

In 2017-18 though, they actually have tangible things to build off of.

While the Nets are expected to sport one of the worst records in the NBA, there is plenty of promise in the frontcourt after the team traded veteran center Brook Lopez to the Los Angeles Lakers for guard D'Angelo Russell.

He will join Jeremy Lin in Brooklyn as the two could create an imposing duo should Russell continue to develop while Lin stays healthy.

On Monday, the Nets learned what their schedule will look like for this upcoming season after the league released each team's slate of games.

Here are the top ones to watch if you're a Nets fan:

Nets @ Knicks
Fri., Oct. 27, 7:30 p.m.
It's hard to say that there is a rivalry between the New York sides because there simply isn't one, yet. Both teams have not been competitive at the same time in years, which makes their meetings a matchup of which is the more inept organization.

But the Nets have an opportunity to show their cross-town rivals that you can't sleep on Brooklyn, even if they are destined for the draft lottery once again.

Nets vs. Golden State Warriors
Sun., Nov. 19, 6 p.m.
Let's be honest, the basketball exhibited by the home team at Barclays Center might be painful to watch at times. And in the largest city in the world, there are plenty of basketball fans who will pay top dollar to see the NBA's biggest stars.

Expect a sellout on Nov. 19 when the defending-champion Warriors come to town. With Stephen Curry, Kevin Durant, Klay Thompson and company in the house, expect to see plenty of front-running Warriors fans in attendance to create a raucous atmosphere.

Nets vs. LA Lakers
Fri., Feb. 2, 7:30 p.m.
The Lakers only trip to Brooklyn provides Nets fans an opportunity to properly thank Brook Lopez for his time with the team.

A loyal servant who was the face of the franchise, Lopez spent nine seasons with the Nets organization, which dated back to its time in New Jersey.

He is the franchise leader in points scored, field goals and blocks, often serving as the lone bright spot on some bad teams.

Jeremy Lin is a constant on a quickly-changing roster. GETTY IMAGES

Beckham believes he has matured, ready for big NFL season

The Giants wide receiver has topped 1,000 receiving yards in each of his first three seasons

KRISTIAN DYER
@KristianRDyer
sports@metro.us

Throughout much of his NFL career, Odell Beckham Jr. has been a loose spirit, free to his own whims and fancies. Much to the consternation of his coaches with the New York Giants, Beckham has gone to the beat of his own drummer and rarely seems tethered to authority.

But now set to enter his fourth year in the NFL, Beckham says that his journey has taken him to a good place in his career and development.

Beckham has drawn the ire of Giants fans, as well as some in the media, for his outbursts on the field and some questionable decisions off of it, things that have yet to affect his production on the field for the Giants. He's topped 1,000 receiving yards his first three seasons in the NFL, made the Pro Bowl three times and be named an All-Pro twice, all while garnering a reputation as the game's top young wide receiver. The question has never been about talent but rather maturity.

A question which Beckham says is now settled.

"I'm just in a different place, I don't even know how to explain it," Beckham said. "I don't even feel like I'm here sometimes. My mind is just out of that. But like I said, just trying to get better each and every day. We talk about it, one percent. So, what can I do to get one percent better than yesterday? And that's obviously the goal. If you stayed the same, you didn't get better at all. And if you're not getting better, that's not why I'm here. So like I said, I'm just trying to get better.

"Life. You get older, you grow, things happen, incidents and things changing. So, I think it's just growth, which is a good thing. I feel like we all can grow and the moment you stop growing, you're not really getting any better as well."

If he can mature, if he can cease from being a liability or losing his cool in games, then the Giants have a weapon unlike any other in the NFL.

Beckham of course made his mark earlier in his career with a one-handed catch against the Dallas Cowboys in a nationally televised game on Sunday night. Since then he's had other remarkable moments including more one-handed grabs.

Odell Beckham Jr. is once again expected to be among the top three or four players taken in fantasy drafts. GETTY IMAGES

He even dazzles in practice and before games with one-handed catches, seemingly showing off. He admits that using one hand can actually help him as he uses his other hand for leverage or balance.

As is becoming typical of him, he made another one-handed catch on Monday's training camp practice.

"Honestly, today before any of it happened, I told them what I was going to do and it just happened," he said. "I feel like yesterday — I told the receivers in the room, I said, 'I don't know what happened, I just kind of clicked out.' Like I said, I'm in a different place right now and he threw the ball and I was like, 'I've seen this before.' It felt like it was like a dream. Just being able to have that confidence and come down with those plays. I try and bring a lot of energy to this team, especially to my wide receiver room."

Perkins, Giants running game starting to feel heat

If there is an area of concern that could derail the Giants' plans of returning to the playoffs this year, it will be their inability to get the run game going. That issue raised itself on Friday night in the Giants 20-12 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers in their first game of preseason.

It should be noted that it was just preseason but the opening returns on the supposedly improved ground game and offensive line is shaky.

Paul Perkins, likely to be the starting running back come Week 1, had just three rushing yards on five carries, this despite starting the game with a seven-yard gain. No running back distinguished himself with Orleans Darkwa the best of the bunch as he had 18 yards on three carries.

The blame doesn't rest entirely on the running back stable as the offensive line rarely opened holes. Especially worrisome was the display of the first team unit as they had struggles in trying to get the ground game going.

Paul Perkins GETTY IMAGES

"We have definitely been a more physical offensive line, but at the end of the day, we can and will do better," guard John Jerry said on Sunday before addressing where this team must improve.

The Giants finished the game with just 73 rushing yards despite handing it off a healthy 23 times. That is 3.2 yards per carry, a stat below their woeful number from last year.

The Giants averaged 88.3 yards per game a season ago, fourth-worst in the NFL. Now they start preseason even worse.

"I think at the running back position Paul Perkins has an opportunity to go out and establish himself," Giants head coach Ben McAdoo said. "I look forward to seeing him getting more carries as we go through the preseason and into the regular season."

Some of it was scheme as the Giants kept their offense purposefully vanilla, allowing the Steelers in their 3-4 to stack the box and make things difficult for the running game to get going. Still, it simply wasn't an encouraging start to preseason for the ground game or their blockers.

Aries Taking on too much or doubting someone who is supposed to share the brunt of the work will cause anxiety. Channel your energy into activities that will help you.

Taurus Participate in events that promote networking. The more time you get to spend with people who have something to offer, the better.

Gemini Don't be disillusioned by what others do or say. Make your life better by putting more muscle behind the changes you want to make at work or to your personal space.

Cancer Keep private matters a secret. Someone will take advantage of information you share and make you look bad if you aren't careful. Personal improvement is encouraged.

Leo Don't exaggerate or brag. Someone will double-check your story and make you look bad. Stay focused and do what you say. Being prompt and precise will help you excel.

Virgo Look at the big picture and use charm and diplomacy instead of making assumptions and overreacting. It's in your best interest to get along and to get things done.

Libra You can spin things in your favor if you show dedication and the ability to reach your goal without outside influence or help. Own what you do to gain respect.

Scorpio Emotional problems will surface at home or work if someone isn't being honest. Get your facts straight before you point a finger at anyone. Avoid taking on too much.

Sagittarius Emotional situations will depend on how you handle matters. If you channel your energy into physical activities, you will lessen the odds of getting into an argument.

Capricorn A meeting, interview or business trip will have hidden costs. If you are negotiating or signing a contract, read the fine print first. An unusual attraction will surprise you.

Aquarius Fixing up your home or purging some of the possessions you no longer use or need will help you unclutter your space, giving you room to explore new possibilities.

Pisces Limitations will set in if you let your emotions take charge, resulting in misleading discussions. Reassess your relationships with those close to you. EUGENIA LAST
